Very Brief Advice

With all of us in mind.

- Many smokers will need to make multiple attempts to quit before achieving long-term success and it is every health professional's responsibility to raise the subject of stopping smoking at every opportunity.
- Smokers expect to be asked about smoking as it shows a health professional's concern about their overall health.
- If health professionals fail to mention smoking at every consultation, smokers are given the impression that it is not affecting their health and are less likely to make a quit attempt.
